THE TELEPOST

will command the telegraphic business of the United States because:

1. It gives the most rapid service, transmitting 1000 words per minute over a single wire.
2. It gives the most trustworthy service: being a machine, it transmits and records with absolute accuracy.
3. It can send a full-page newspaper article from New York to Chicago in ten minutes, over a single wire, and at a small fraction of the Western Union's press rate.
4. The Telepost is extending its lines rapidly and will cover the entire United States in a surprisingly short period; it requires only 4 wires on its main trunk lines to handle as much business as the old companies can do on 68 wires worked quadruplex, or on 136 wires worked duplex—their most efficient methods.
5. The Telepost gives the cheapest service: 10-word telecards for 10 cents; 25-word telegrams, or 50-word "telepost," or 100-word "teletapes" for 25 cents regardless of distance. Yet the Telepost with its low rates makes an average profit per message, four times that of the Western Union at its high rates.
