We can get a sense of the enthusiasm surrounding the official release of the Lincoln Memorial issue on February 12 by examining samples of first day covers from across the nation.

On Time—The new Lincoln commemorative stamps were placed on sale as promised on February 12th, and readers themselves have now seen how our busy government has paused to honor the illustrious Emancipator. Philatelists will readily appreciate the significance of the envelope bearing the stamp with the postmark of February 12th; and they now applaud the gracious act of the authorities in so appropriately marking the anniversary.
